Partit Laburista in Government continues to invest in the quality of life of older people

A Partit Laburista delegation visited the Marsascala day care centre, where it met with the elderly people who attend the centre and enjoy spending time together in a welcoming and pleasant environment. The delegation was made up of Minister Deo Debattista and Members of Parliament Yana Borg Debono Grech and Francesca Zarb.

During the visit, Minister Deo Debattista said that a Labour Government remains committed to ensuring a better quality of life for older people. After dedicating so many years to contributing towards the country's progress, older people deserve to enjoy their later years in a pleasant environment, with peace of mind and stability. He stressed that the Labour Government continues to invest in their wellbeing while ensuring access to the best possible healthcare services. This forms part of its ongoing commitment to enabling older people to live with dignity and receive the support they deserve.

Parliamentary Member Francesca Zarb said that the measures announced in this year's Budget further demonstrate how a Labour Government is delivering social policies that make a tangible difference in people's lives.

She highlighted two measures in particular: the provision allowing widowers to receive their full pension alongside their late spouse's pension, and the measure concerning the transfer of social security contributions. These are important measures that address different realities faced by pensioners and will provide thousands of people with greater financial security and peace of mind.

Parliamentary Member Yana Borg Debono Grech highlighted that the Labour Government has delivered on its promise, with this year's Budget providing the twelfth consecutive increase in pensions. This reflects the Government's commitment to continuing to strengthen pensions and improve the quality of life of older people.

Partit Laburista remains committed to placing older people at the heart of its work, pursuing policies that recognise their contribution to society and strive to guarantee them a better future.
